

Summer Solstice Shave raised over $2,500 for Camp Quality

Far left, fundraising was one of the goals during the Summer Solstice Shave at Sylvan Lake's Royal Canadian Legion after the 1913 Days parade Saturday afternoon. In that vein editor Steve Dills acquiesced and allowed his eyebrows and mustache to be shaved by Brenda Mathew when additional money was contributed by the audience. Several of the females in the audience also paid a few dollars to kiss the shaved heads of the four volunteers, leaving bright red lipstick on their scalps. For Mathew it was the first time she'd shaved a mustache and for Dills the first time since his school days he's been without the upper lip growth.

Near left, Gil Pubanz paid close attention as she took another strip of hair off Wayne Sundell's head during the Summer Solstice Shave held at Sylvan Lake's Royal Canadian Legion following Saturday's 1913 Days parade. Four Legion members had their heads shaved and raised over $2,500 for Camp Quality (www.campquality.com), an organization which provides week long camping experiences for children with cancer at Camp Kannawin on the shores of Sylvan Lake.

Bottom left, Steve Dills, Nikki Eroshinsky Coles, Frank Walker and Wayne Sundell showed varying degrees of enjoyment as the Summer Solstice Shave was completed at Sylvan Lake's Royal Canadian Legion Saturday afternoon. The group raised over $2,500 for Camp Quality. CARSON PAPKE PHOTOS